Governance Structure, Roles, and Responsibilities

An Overview of Baltimore County Government

- Population: 854,535 (2020 Census).
 - 3rd most populous Maryland County, after Montgomery and Prince George's.
- Geographic Size: 682 square miles.
 - 3rd largest Maryland county by land area, after Frederick and Garrett.
 - Surrounds the independent City of Baltimore on three sides.
- Form of Government: “Executive-Council” Charter (est. 1956).
- County Council: 7 members (elected by district).
- Incorporated Cities or Towns: 0.
- Annual Operating Budget: $2.7 Billion (including $1 Billion for BCPS).

Overview of Government Structures

- Four primary layers of government: Federal, State, County, and Municipal
 - Federal: President and Congress
 - State: Governor and Maryland General Assembly
 - County: County Executive and Council
 - No municipalities
- Each level has different responsibilities
 - Federal level has more influence on national issues, matters of national security and foreign policy, and other issues.
 - State legislators have focus on laws that affect entire state, budget, and education.
 - County level very focused on land use, education, public safety, public works and infrastructure, solid waste, and the water and sewer system.
 - Municipal governments have many of the same responsibilities of county governments, but often not as involved with school system, library system, or community colleges.

The Baltimore County Council

- Established as 7-member County Council in 1956.
 - Each member is elected by district.
 - Previously, Baltimore County had seven Commissioners, elected County-wide.
- Led by Council Chair, who is selected annually and voted on by fellow Councilmembers.
- The County Council serves as the Legislative Branch of Baltimore County Government, separate from the Executive Branch, led by the County Executive.

County Council Roles and Responsibilities

- Zoning Authority: Council has primary control over zoning
- Oversight of Budget: Votes on budget and can make cuts
- Drafting and voting on legislation
- Votes to approve on Department Heads and Board members appointed by County Executive
- Voting on certain County contracts
- Providing constituent services support

Comparison to other Levels of Government

- Baltimore County has no municipalities, like towns or cities.
 - Towns and cities, like Bel Air in Harford County or Annapolis in Anne Arundel County, are smaller governments below the County level.
 - Often have a Mayor and Town Council, with their own budget and land use authorities.
- Baltimore County has 24 Census Designated Places, which are unincorporated communities that are statistically similar to a municipality, but do not have a government structure.
 - Examples include Towson, Catonsville, and Dundalk.

Roles and Responsibilities of Counties and Municipalities in Maryland

- County and Municipal Governments often serve similar roles and functions, but there is not universal overlap.
- Overlap may be seen in planning and zoning, public safety, public works, transportation, recreation and parks, economic development.
- Counties generally are more actively involved in education, community colleges, libraries, and health departments.
- Municipalities may, sometimes, take a more active role than the County in “extracurriculars,” such as parades, festivals, tree lightings.

Roles and Responsibilities of Counties and Municipalities (cont'd)

- Creating municipalities is NOT within the scope of the workgroup, nor is it a staff recommendation.
- This is an exercise to examine other structures and how they can provide additional representation in government.
- The mandate of this Workgroup to examine other structures and how they can provide additional representation in government.
- Because there are so many counties in the U.S. with municipalities, understanding their role in local government is important.

Takeaways from County and Municipal Services

- Counties generally provide more services than municipalities.
- Municipalities add extra layer of representation in the form of Mayors, Councilmembers, and other local boards.
- While the services provided by municipalities varies, common themes include public safety, land use planning, and economic development.
- One advantage of municipalities is more attention or resources for land use planning in a specific area.
- As a reminder, Baltimore County has no municipalities – all of this work is done by County Administration and Council.

Municipalities vs Census Designated Places (CDP)

- Municipalities are incorporated towns or cities, with an active government structure and a legally defined boundary.
- CDPs are unincorporated communities that do not have a governmental structure or legally defined boundary.
 - Baltimore County has 32 CDPs, including communities like Catonsville, Towson, and Dundalk.
 - CDPs have no impact on county government or redistricting, but are important for understanding our communities.
 - CDPs are a product of the U.S. Census Bureau that provide meaningful statistics for well-known, unincorporated communities.

Census Designated Places: Criteria and Guidelines

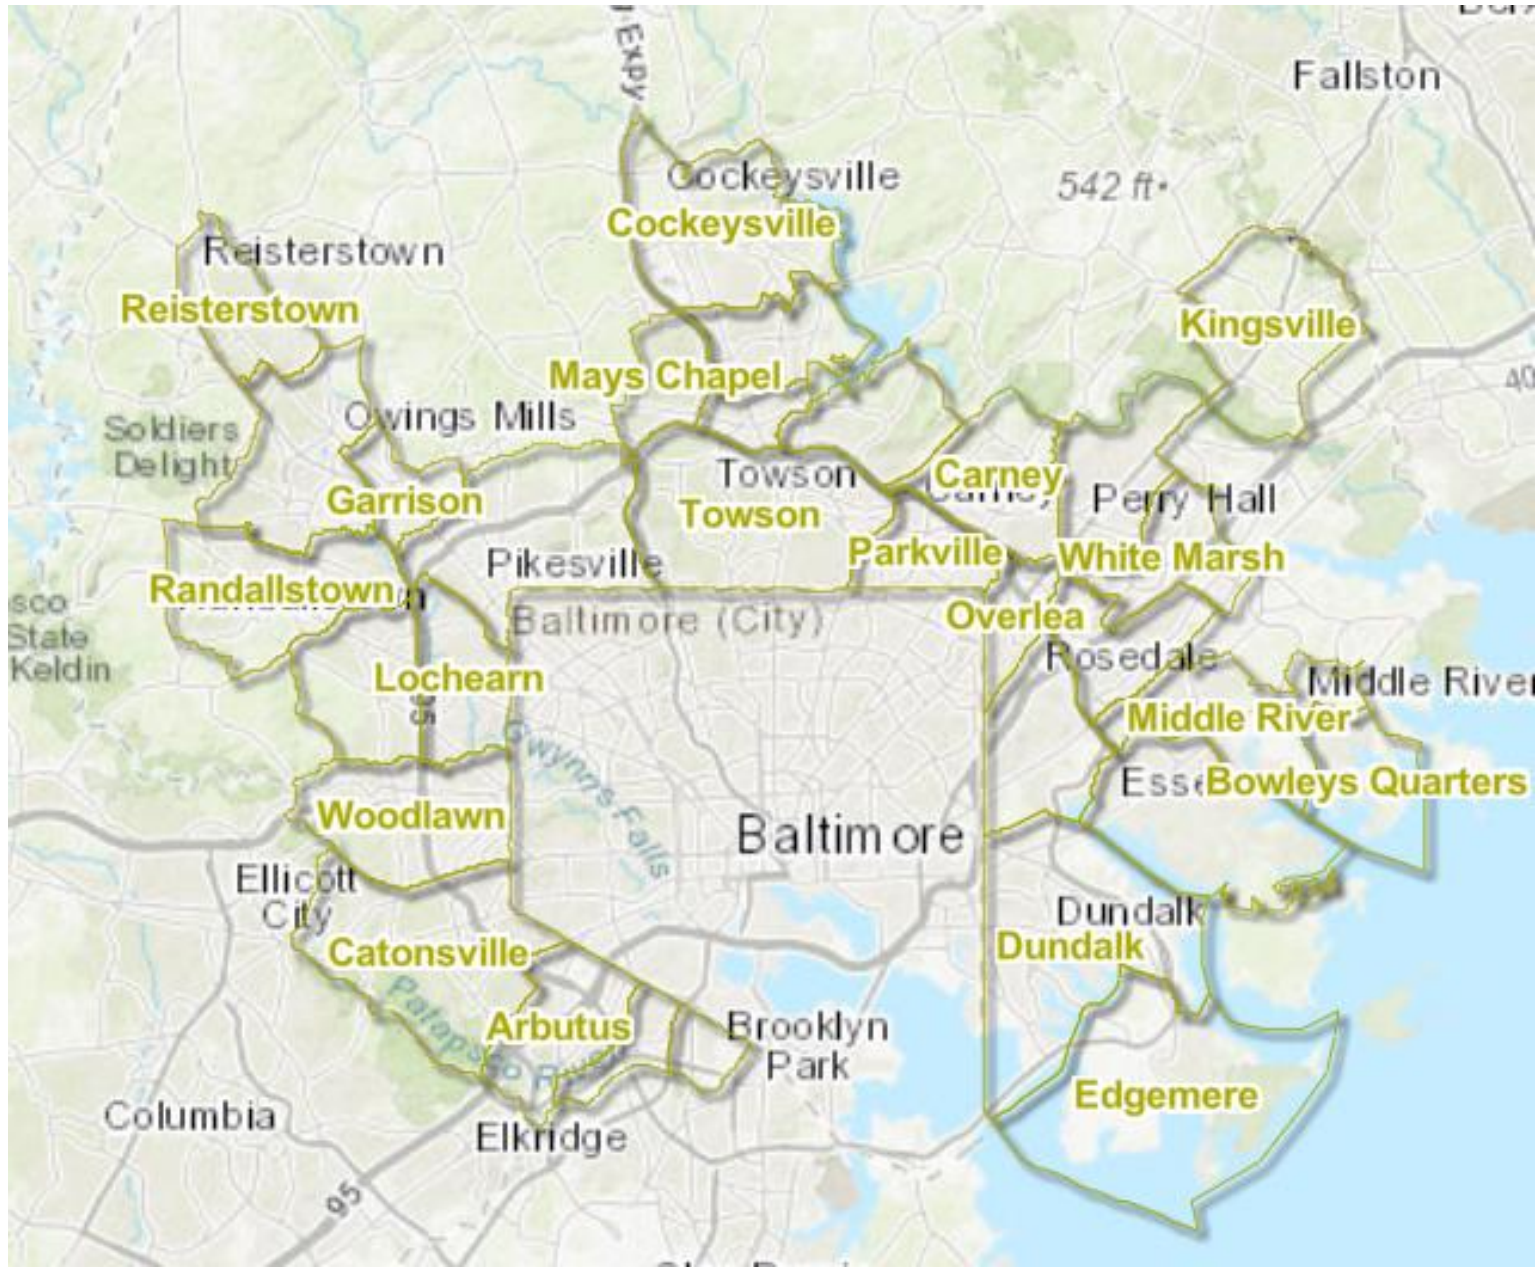

- Constitute a single, named, contiguous geographic area containing a mix of residential, nonresidential, and commercial uses. Some predominantly residential communities may also be recognized as CDPs.
- Cannot be partially or entirely within an incorporated place or another CDP.
- Can be located in more than one county but cannot cross state boundaries.
- Contain at least some population or housing units. The Census Bureau may request a justification for CDPs delineated with fewer than ten housing units.
- May not have the same name as an adjacent or nearby incorporated place. Adding a directional to the name to differentiate is not acceptable if that name is not in local use.
- Can have a name change if the new name provides a better identification of the community.
- Boundaries should follow visible features such as roads, rivers, railroads, or nonvisible features such as parcel boundaries, adjacent incorporated place boundaries, or other Census Bureau geographies (e.g., school district boundaries, block group boundaries, etc.).
